About

Adam Gaffin is executive editor, online, for Network World, a trade magazine which is part of the Boston-based International Data Group publishing enterprise. Earlier in his career, he worked for suburban newspapers and he has now launched UniversalHub as a sideline interest.

UniversalHub.com is using open-source Drupal-based software and is among a number of local-news websites innovating with RSS feeds from contributing-writer weblogs. This is discussed as a concept at Poynter Institute post.

Gaffin is also the author of the classic "Everybody's Guide to the Internet," (July, 1994) a how-to guide book to the Internet that is updated online and is a project of the Electronic Frontier Foundation.
